WHY FEVER -3.5 + THE OVER

- ▶ Indiana red-hot at home — routed the Aces 109–75 last week
- ▶ Home at Gainbridge; Clark fully healthy and pushing the league's fastest pace
- ▶ Two top-8 offenses; 169.5 is a soft number for a Clark-run game

WHY THE CLARK POINTS PROP

- ▶ Clark's usage spikes at home; Valkyries rank mid-pack defending lead guards
- ▶ Full-strength after the heater — no minutes restriction
- ▶ Line: Over 22.5 points; no minutes cap

Lynx spread (-110)

WHY THE OVER 182.5

- ▶ Lynx own an elite offense; Sparks play fast and defend poorly
- ▶ Sharps flagged the Sparks as "a terrible defense" this week
- ▶ Even a Minnesota rout clears the number if LA keeps running

WHY LYNX -12.5 (SMALLER)

- ▶ 18-6 vs 10-12; Minnesota is the class of the league at home
- ▶ Sized down — double-digit WNBA spreads are live to back-door
- ▶ Pairs with the Over: a comfortable Lynx win covers both

WHY SKY MONEYLINE

- ▶ Seattle is 6-19 — the worst team on the board — and on the road
- ▶ Chicago at home is the cleaner side of a bad-vs-bad matchup
- ▶ Taking the win outright (-130) rather than laying the short spread

CARD CONSTRUCTION

- ▶ Two totals + a strong home favorite + a marquee prop = structural lean
- ▶ Leans into our pattern: props/totals have out-hit the pick-'em bets
- ▶ One longshot stacks our four most-confident sides across games

Post-mortem. The card was built on Indiana at home and Indiana never showed up: the Valkyries — riding an eight-game streak we underweighted — won 88–75, killing the spread, the game over, the parlay, and (via a surprise minutes restriction on Clark's back) the marquee prop in one stroke. Clark played 26 minutes and shot 4-for-14 for 13 points; the "no minutes cap" premise in our writeup was wrong by tip-off. The structural reads elsewhere held: the Sparks–Lynx over cashed by half a point and the Sky beat the worst team on the board. But the Lynx spread died by inches again — won by 9, needed 13. Final: 2–5, –$446.85. Same lesson, ninth card: totals live, favorites lay too many.
