FIGHTER ANALYSIS

MCGREGOR — PATHS TO WIN

- Left-hand counter KO power remains elite at 37
- 5-inch reach advantage could pay off at welterweight
- Bigger at 170 lbs — may hit harder than at 145/155
- Holloway's chin has been tested; Topuria KO a concern
- Most motivated camp in years per camp reports

HOLLOWAY — PATHS TO WIN

- 6.91 sig. strikes/min — highest volume in the division
- Active 3 months ago; McGregor hasn't fought since 2021
- Bigger, stronger build at WW per training footage
- McGregor fades hard after R1 — all 3 recent losses TKO
- Trained with Jack Della Maddalena for WW sparring

MCGREGOR — RED FLAGS

- 5-year ring rust — last won Jan 2020
- Broken tibia never fully stress-tested vs active elite
- Historically no gas tank past R1 at heavier weights
- 0 takedowns in last 11 fights — one-dimensional
- Off-octagon issues raise question marks on camp quality

HOLLOWAY — RED FLAGS

- First welterweight fight — unknown cardio at 170
- Dominated by Oliveira's grappling in last outing
- Chin has been tested by Topuria and Gaethje
- Alternating W/L pattern over last 4 fights
- Punching power may diminish at new weight

ROUND-BY-ROUND PROJECTION

1

McGregor dangerous. Feeling out. Conor hunts the early KO.

2

Holloway volume picks up. McGregor slows. Pace tilts Max's way.

3

⚡ McGregor fades. Holloway overwhelming. Stoppage likely.

ROUND

4-5

If we get here, Holloway by wide decision. McGregor likely stopped before.

MAIN EVENT PREDICTION

MAX HOLLOWAY

TKO / KO VICTORY

PREDICTED ROUND: 3

The narrative is compelling but the math is brutal for McGregor. Holloway averages nearly 7 significant strikes per minute against an opponent who hasn't felt Octagon speed since 2021 and has been stopped in all six career losses — three of the last four after the opening round. McGregor's best and arguably only realistic path is a first-round stoppage via that iconic left hand. If the fight exits R1 with Holloway upright, the odds of a McGregor victory drop dramatically. Holloway's relentless forward pressure, superior conditioning, and vastly superior recent activity form a combination McGregor's fading gas tank cannot overcome.

CONFIDENCE

✓ ACTUAL RESULT — Holloway def. McGregor, TKO, R1 1:09. Winner and method called correctly (round missed: predicted R3, ended R1). McGregor blew out his knee attempting a jumping kick seconds into the fight — the official result stands as a TKO. Grading note: method-of-victory bets follow the official result (TKO), so Holloway by KO/TKO cashes, though a few books void injury stoppages.
